1. About 16 to 18 single-engine ground attack planes were standing at the Doeberitz (N 53/Z 65) airfield. * About half were parked on the northern edge and the rest on the southern edge. Two single-engine low-wing monoplanes were standing in the southwestern corner of the field. Their antenna rods were installed in the middle of the cockpit. Parts of the cockpit and the engine were missing on both planes.
2. Three ground attack planes were parked a short distance from the other aircraft in the northern section of the field. They differed from the other planes in that their cockpits were not as angular and about 25 percent longer, their wing-tips were slightly more rounded. There were no pants on their landing gear, their bomb racks were under the wings outside the landing gear, and no weapons projected aft. There were no markings on their rudder assemblies.  The leading edge of the rudder assemblies of the remaining ground attack planes. *

- 25X1 * Comment. The report confirms the occupation of the airfield by ground attack aircraft. Two ground attack regiments have been estimated to be stationed in Doeberitz. There were no indications of a transfer of ground attack planes.
- 25X1  Comment. The description is that of the IL-2 type. This aircraft type, like the IL-10, is used for training.
